Type of route: circular

Approximate length of the route: 12.2 km

Maximum altitude: 350 m

Level of difficulty: easy to intermediate

Approximate time: 2 h 30 m

Route markers: marks with orange arrows

Start out at the railway station car park and head towards the church. Turn left on to the first street you find, Pere Porter Street, and continue along until it ends, at which point you will turn to the right. Go on to the groves of poplar trees.

You will arrive at a stream, but do not cross it. Follow the path alongside it. About 500 metres further along, you will find a bridge and a footbridge, but walk straight on. Another 500 metres further ahead, you will see a crossing, yet continue on.

About 1 km further along, turn to the left and cross the bridge over the stream. After a few metres, you will pass by a path. Continue along, and you will come to an abandoned quarry, and about 500 metres further along, a crossing, at which you need to turn left. You will see another crossroads, but go straight on, to the industrial estate.

You will then arrive at a paved stretch of the path. Follow it for about 500 metres. Turn left at the first street, and you will head back into the forest. At the end of the street, follow the path that goes down along the right-hand side of the industrial estate. Follow it for about 1 km. Before you arrive at the paved road again, turn left when you see a house. Head towards the groves of trees.

Here, you will cross an irrigation channel and then, you must continue straight on. Turn left at the crossing you will come to about 500 metres further along. You will find another crossing about 100 metres further ahead, but go straight on. Cross two irrigation channels, and you will reach the restored, permanent lagoon, which you can visit.

Walk along the same path until you arrive at the stream. Cross it and head back to the RENFE train station to return to the starting point.
